AN UPDATE ON OUR SUPPLY CHAIN

Dear Co-op Shoppers,

Late last week the Co-op's primary Natural and Organic supplier, United Natural Foods, Inc (UNFI), suffered a major interruption to their communication and technology systems. This has severely hindered their ability to service their customers, including food cooperatives across the country.

As a result, we won't receive our usual UNFI deliveries on Monday, and we expect there will be very limited service for the rest of this week. We are currently working with our other local and national suppliers to fill the void, but we expect that there will be organic product shortages on our shelves for the rest of this week.

Rest assured we are doing everything we can to mitigate the impact on our customers, and we hope the problems are rectified shortly. In the meantime, we appreciate your patience.

Cooperatively,
Ed King, General Manager

Cheese of the Week: Withersbrook Blue

Most blue cheeses go bold with salt and sharpness—but Withersbrook Blue from Jasper Hill Farm takes a different path. Washed with Vermont Ice Cider during aging, this raw cow's milk cheese develops a distinct fruity brightness that sets it apart. The cider wash doesn't just lend a subtle sheen to the rind—it infuses the paste with a gentle, orchard-born tang that's unmistakably apple-y. Aged for 60 days in the Cellars at Jasper Hill, it is then soaked in cider for 4 months. Withersbrook has a dense, creamy texture veined with delicate streaks of blue mold. The flavor is deeply layered: notes of crisp apple and pear compote mingle with toasted nuts, cultured butter, and a lingering savory finish. It's a blue cheese that surprises with its approachability—less bite, more bloom. Perfect for a cheese board or a summer picnic alike, Withersbrook Blue shines next to honeycrisp slices, toasted pecans, and a glass of Vermont Ice Cider or off-dry Riesling. A cheese that tastes like the orchard it was raised in—this is blue with a twist.
